

This story is brought to you by Ririro.com for free. Our mission is to give all children in the world free access to a variety of stories. The stories can be read, downloaded and printed online and cover a wide range of topics, including animals, fantasy, science, history, diverse cultures and much more.

Support our mission by sharing our website. We wish you a lot of fun reading!

Ririro

IMAGINATION OVER KNOWLEDGE

Ririro

How Night Came

Years and years ago at the very beginning of time, when the world had just been made, there was no night. It was day all the time. No one had ever heard of sunrise or sunset, starlight or moonbeams. There were no night birds, no night beasts, no night flowers. There were no lengthening shadows, no soft night air, heavy with perfume.

In those days the daughter of the Great Sea Serpent, who dwelt in the depths of the seas, married one of the sons of the great earth race known as Man. She left her home among the shades of the deep seas and came to dwell with her husband in the land of daylight. Her eyes grew weary of the bright sunlight and her beauty faded. Her husband watched her with sad eyes, but he did not know what to do to help her.

"O, if night would only come," she moaned as she tossed about wearily on her couch. "Here it is always day, but in my father's kingdom there are many shadows. O, just a little of the darkness of night!"

Her husband listened to her moanings. "What is night?" he asked her. "Tell me about it and perhaps I can get a little of it for you."

"Night," said the daughter of the Great Sea Serpent, "is the name we give to the heavy shadows which darken my father's kingdom in the depths of the seas. I love the sunlight of your earth land, but I grow very tired of it. If we could have only a little of the darkness of my father's kingdom to rest our eyes some of the time."

Her husband at once called his three most faithful servants. "I am about to send you on a journey," he told them. "You are to go to the kingdom of the Great Sea Serpent who dwells in the depths of the seas and ask him to give you some of the darkness of night so that his daughter won't die here amid the sunlight of our earth land."

The three servants went to the kingdom of the Great Sea Serpent. After a long dangerous journey they arrived at his home in the depths of the seas and asked him to give them some of the shadows of night to carry back to the earth land. The Great Sea Serpent gave them a big bag full at once. It was securely fastened and the Great Sea Serpent warned them not to open it until they were in the presence of his daughter.

The three servants started out, holding the big bag full of night on their heads.

Soon they heard strange sounds within the bag. It was the sound of the voices of all the night beasts, all the night birds, and all the night insects. If you have ever heard the night chorus from the jungles on the banks of the rivers you will know how it sounded. The three servants had never heard sounds like those in all their lives. They were terribly frightened.

"Let's drop the bag full of night right here where we are and run away as fast as we can," said the first servant.

"We shall perish. We shall perish, anyway, whatever we do," cried the second servant.

"Whether we perish or not I am going to open the bag and see what makes all those terrible sounds," said the third servant.

They laid the bag on the ground and opened it. Out rushed all the night beasts and all the night birds and all the night insects and out rushed the great black cloud of night. The servants were more frightened than ever at the darkness and escaped to the jungle.

The daughter of the Great Sea Serpent was waiting anxiously for the return of the servants with the bag full of night. Ever since they had started out on their journey she had looked for their return, shading her eyes with her hand and gazing away off at the horizon, hoping with all her heart that they would hurry to bring the night. In that position she was standing under a royal palm tree, when the three servants opened the bag and let night escape. "Night comes. Night comes at last," she cried, as she saw the clouds of night on the horizon. Then she closed her eyes and went to sleep there under the royal palm tree. When she woke up she felt greatly refreshed. She was once more the happy princess who had left her father's kingdom in the depths of the great seas to come to the earth land. She was now ready to see the day again. She looked up at the bright star shining above the royal palm tree and said, "O, bright beautiful star, you will be called the morning star and you will let us know that the day is approaching. You shall reign queen of the sky at this hour." Then she called all the birds around her and said to them, "O, wonderful, sweet singing birds, I command you to sing your sweetest songs at this hour to let us know that the day is approaching." The cock was standing by her side. "You," she said to him, "shall be appointed the watchman of the night. Your voice shall mark the watches of the night and shall warn the others that the madrugada comes." To this very day in Brazil we call the early morning the madrugada. The cock announces its approach to the waiting birds. The birds sing their sweetest songs at that hour and the morning star reigns in the sky as queen of the madrugada. When it was daylight again the three servants crept home through the forests and jungles with their empty bag. "O, faithless servants," said their master, "why did you not obey the voice of the Great Sea Serpent and open the bag only in the presence of his daughter? Because of your disobedience I will change you into monkeys. You will live in the trees. Your lips will always bear the mark of the sealing wax which sealed the bag full of night." To this very day one sees the mark on the monkeys' lips, where they bit off the wax which sealed the bag; and in Brazil night leaps out quickly upon the earth just as it leapt quickly out of the bag in those days at the beginning of time. And all the night beasts and night birds and night insects give a sunset chorus in the jungles at nightfall.